

HOW LITTLE MINTY CAME OUT ALL RIGHT.

There were once two little fairies, very small ones of that kind that are just big enough to ride upon butterflies, who were named Inty and Minty. Inty was a boy and Minty was a girl fairy, and they were both generally great friends with each other, and very happy. One day they went out into the woods to see whether the honeysuckles were out yet. These flowers are great favorites with the fairies, and the honey from one of them is enough for a fairy's supper, which don't amount to much, you know. Well, these two little things went wandering away, ever so far, until they came to a brook that was babbling and rushing along just as fast as it could go. There was a little branch of a tree lying across it, and Inty thought that they could cross on it. Little Minty was afraid, but she allowed herself to be coax-ed. So they both walked over the water on the branch, and they both slipped, of course, and popped into the brook they went. Poor little Minty was carried away by the rushing water, and she was so frightened and so nearly drowned that she could not call out, nor did she see anything of Inty. Every minute she expected to sink beneath the waves, and when she passed near a little reed or a blade of grass on the shore, she would grasp at it, but they all broke off, or else she could not reach them. At length she came to a lily growing by the brookside, which had a large bud on the top of a long stalk. There had been a storm the night before, and the lily had been so bent down by the heavy rain that the bud now lay in the water. As she came near this, Minty clutched at it, and this time she held on tight, and the swift brook could not carry her any further. But she was in the water yet, and so chilled and wet that she thought every minute she would be obliged to let go and be drowned. But the sun, which had been under the clouds nearly all the morning, now came out warm and bright, and the lily-stalk straightened itself up as the sun shone on it, and it lifted little Minty out of the water, and high up into the air. Now, everything was so bright and beautiful in the warm summer air that the bud thought it might as well open, and so it did. Then Minty, she got inside and took off her wet clothes and hung them over the side to dry, and cuddled her little white self all up in the bottom of the flower until they were ready to put on. When she had dressed herself again, there came a bumble-bee looking in. He did not see Minty, who hid herself behind a petal, but in his eases, and took all the yellow stuff he could find to carry home and make honey out of it. Minty wasn't afraid of him, because he had a white spot on his head, and that is the kind that never sting. So when he turned to go Minty just got on his back behind his wings, and away they went, up into the sweet-smelling air. The old bumble-bee went along very well for a little while, and then he began to think that his honey-bags were unusually heavy, and so he looked around, and there was a fairy!

for them. So Corne, he steered into a little cove, and they all got off, and listened to what Limberlock had to say. He told them that he had been a lot of bumblebees and a wasp very recently shutting up a fairy in a fence rail. He would have interfered, but supposing it was all right, perhaps a sentence of the fairies themselves, he concluded it would be better for him to mind his own business. But as it might have been little Minty, he would try and show them where it happened. Accordingly, he led the way and all the fairies followed, and even old Corne, the turtle, got his boat ashore and came after the rest, although a good way behind. When the dwarf reached the old wall he saw a good many fence-rails lying about, and he could not tell which was the proper one. He saw a wasp, whom he recognized as Wire, engaged in plastering up a number of holes, evidently to mislead any one who should come to look for Minty. So the dwarf he stepped up softly and gave the wasp a slap with his hat that settled him. At the noise this made a bumblebee stuck his head out of another hole. It was Briar. The dwarf knew him in a minute, and seized him by the head before he could draw back. He carried him to where the fairies were scratching at the plaster over various holes, and calling all the time to Minty, and told him that if he did not immediately point out the hole where the little fairy was he would squeeze him to death. So old Briar had to do it, and the plaster came off that hole quick enough, I tell you. But Minty did not come out. She was frightened, and thought that whoever was scratching above there must be a wasp or a bee; so she sat trembling at the very bottom of the hole. A cousin of hers named Cutey, who was very sensible, and who was sure that she was alive when the dwarf saw her, dropped in, proposed that they should all sing some song that she would hear, and which would assure that her friends were near. So they all stood in a half-circle, and the fairies, the turtle, and even the old bumblebee, who began to be ashamed of what he had done—and they sang:—

FINANCIAL. THE UNDERSIGNED Offer For Sale $2,000,000 OF THE PENNSYLVANIA CENTRAL RR. CO. GENERAL MORTGAGE Six Per Cent. Bonds At 92 1/2 and Interest added to Date of Purchase. All free from State tax, and issued in sums of $1000. These Bonds are Conson and Registered—Interest on the former payable January and July 1; on the latter, April and October. The bonds secured by this mortgage are issued to WISTAR MORRIS and JOSIAH BACON, Trustees, who cannot, under its provisions, deliver to the Company, at any time, an amount of bonds exceeding the full-paid capital stock of the Company—limited to $20,000,000. Enough of these bonds are withheld to pay off all existing liens upon the property of the Company, to meet which at maturity it now holds ample means independently of the bonds to be reserved by the Trustees for that purpose, making the bonds practically a FIRST MORTGAGE upon all its railways, their equipment, real estate, etc. etc. The gross revenue of the Pennsylvania Railroad in 1869 was $17,250,551, or nearly twenty-eight per cent of the capital and debts of the Company at the end of that year. Since 1857 the dividends to the Stockholders have averaged nearly five and one-half per cent per annum after paying interest on its bonds and passing a large amount to the credit of construction account. The security upon which the bonds are based is, therefore, of the most ample character, and places them on a par with the very best National securities. For further particulars apply to Jay Cooke & Co., E. W. Clark & Co., Drexel & Co., C. & H. Borie, W. H. Newbold, Son & Aertsen. NEW LOAN. City of Allegheny Six Per Cents, FREE OF STATE TAX. We are offering a limited amount of this Loan At 90 Per Cent, and Accrued Interest. The interest is payable first days of January and July, in Philadelphia, FREE OF STATE TAX. We recommend them as an unquestionable security for investment. The debt of Allegheny City being comparatively small, the security offered is equal to that of the City of Philadelphia, the difference in price making them a very desirable and cheap security. WM.
